General Steps to Organizing an ACM SRC for Host Conferences

The ACM Student Research Competition (SRC), sponsored by Microsoft Research, offers a unique forum for ACM student members at the undergraduate and graduate levels to present their original research at well-known conferences before a panel of judges and conference attendees. The SRC gives visibility to not only up-and-coming young researchers, but also to the field of computer science research and its community. As a funded program, the ACM SRC is self-sustaining and does not require financial support from the host conference budget. Rather, it creates a new venue for attracting additional participants and awareness of a conference, as well as opportunities for learning and networking among researchers and practitioners.

Although each host conference is unique, the steps outlined below capture the basic structure of an ACM SRC, regardless of host venue.

Prior to the conference:

1. Identify an SRC competition chair to be the liaison between the host conference, ACM, reviewers, jurors, and participants. This individual should be someone well acquainted with the conference and have strong ties within the research community.
2. Publish a call for submissions to the competition, based upon the host conferences existing structure and audience. The requirements for participation in an ACM SRC are:
 - Participants must register for the host conference as well as be currently enrolled in a university or college and have an active student membership. All requirements of participation can be found at <https://src.acm.org/participate>
 - Graduate(Masters or PhD program) or Undergraduate student status at the time of submission
 - Submission of an extended abstract of no more than 800 words on a topic of relevance to the host conference.
3. Identify a panel of reviewers who will review the submitted abstracts
4. Distribute abstracts for review
5. Arrange for conference time and space for the two parts of the SRC competition
6. Collect results from reviewers
7. Notify participants of their acceptance or rejection
8. Notify ACM of the selected participants. The participant list should be provided on an excel spreadsheet and include the following:

Category(Grad/Undergrad)/ Participant name/ University attending/Mailing address/
Mailing address2/ City/ State/Province/ Postal Code/ Country/ ACM Number/ Email address/Paper Title

9. (ACM will contact participants directly regarding travel grants for use in traveling to the host conference)

10. Identify panel of jurors who will be able to attend both portions of the competition at the conference

At the conference:

11. Arrange for SRC materials to be distributed at conference registration (schedule of SRC events, contact information for Chair and participants, pp.12-14 of this manual)

12. Ensure that conference space and arrangements are in order

13. Attend poster session and disseminate results shortly thereafter

14. Attend presentation session and disseminate results immediately after

15. Announce winners at conference wide event

16. Complete report on event and submit to ACM headquarters

Administrative and marketing support is available from staff at ACM headquarters, as are insights from others' prior experiences. The materials contained in the Chair's manual are intended to guide the competition Chair through the process of organizing an SRC and provide as much support as necessary to make the event a success.
